

Jack White to bring 'The Supply Chain Issues Tour' to Artpark

'Fear of the Dawn' & 'Entering Heaven Alive' available for preorder

Jack White has announced the first dates of "The Supply Chain Issues Tour," with shows in North America, Europe and the U.K.

The show visits the Artpark Mainstage Theater at 8 p.m. Sunday, Aug. 21. Tickets go on sale at 10 a.m. Friday, Dec. 17, and range from $45 for general admission lawn to $85, $105 and $115 for indoor reserved seating. Prices include a facility fee; additional fees apply for online and phone orders. Purchase tickets online at www.ticketmaster.com; by phone at 716-754-4375 between the hours of 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. weekdays; or from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Dec. 17 in person at the Artpark box office, 450 S. Fourth St., Lewiston.

This is a phone-free show. For more information, visit www.artpark.net.

The tour produced by Live Nation – which includes White's first headline shows in four years – will begin with two special "Fear of the Dawn" album release shows on April 8-9 at Detroit's Masonic Temple Theatre.

Third Man Records Vault Members will have access to first pre-sale tickets beginning at 10 a.m. local time Monday, Dec. 13. Additionally, Citi is the official card of White's "Supply Chain Issues Tour." Citi cardmembers will have access to presale tickets for U.S. shows beginning at 10 a.m. local time Tuesday, Dec. 14.

The tour will celebrate the upcoming release of two brand-new White albums: "Fear of the Dawn," which arrives everywhere via Third Man Records on April 8; and "Entering Heaven Alive," which will follow on July 22. Both are available for preorder on vinyl and CD.

Additional 2022 concerts at Artpark currently on sale include: Lake Street Dive (May 29); Bon Iver (June 7); "Trombone Shorty's Voodoo Threauxdown" (June 14); Patti LaBelle (June 21); Barenaked Ladies with Gin Blossoms and Toad the Wet Sprocket (July 5); Tedeschi Trucks Band with Los Lobos and Gabe Dixon (July 12); "Weird Al" Yankovic (July 29); Earth, Wind & Fire (July 31); and Dispatch and O.A.R. (Aug. 23).

At the same time, for as easy and breezy as it looks for us, the audience, there's a lot of work that goes into that – which we don't necessarily see.

How do you make that hard work come across so that it looks so effortless, and so that it looks so easy and breezy on screen?

Ashley Newbrough: Oh, that is hugely thanks to the crew. That is the crew. That's the hair and makeup. We're exhausted; we sit in the hair and makeup trailer, and they make us look pretty. You know, it's the ADs that run and grab us water at any given moment.

That requires a team effort, for sure, because those shoots – it's usually a 15-day shoot. So, you're working really long hours; you're not getting too much sleep, because you have to learn lines for the next day and stay on top of everything. It's a grind, but I love it. And it's definitely a passion of mine. I wouldn't have it any other way.

That looking easy and breezy, that is totally reliant on the team. You've got to have the director and the crew that's working their @sses off. That's what that is that you see: everyone working really hard together and making it look easy, when that's not necessarily the case. But we are having fun. Which is also very important. I think when you love what you do, you can work a lot harder. And it can look easy – or at least it should.

It is hard, for sure, especially, too, when you're outside and it's freezing, and you have to act not cold. That can also be a bit of a challenge. I've had it before where my face actually starts to freeze, and I can feel it not moving as much. And again, wardrobe, usually the moment they call "Cut," they'll come running in with like massive parkas and wrap them around us. And they'll have heating packets that they're warming up for us, and just putting under our wardrobes strategically. Everyone's on top of it, and really working hard to keep everybody happy and moving.

I had one movie we were shooting outside, and it was like minus-22. It was the coldest I have ever been in my entire life. I didn't think my body was ever going to bounce back, but it did. But yeah, my mouth, I can feel it start to tense up and freeze a bit. And that is challenging, because then it becomes very distracting while you're doing the scene, because you're wondering if your lines are going to come out of your mouth the way they're supposed to.

More on "Christmas for Keeps":

Ashley Newbrough: This is the first time I've done an ensemble. I think this might be the first time Hallmark's done an ensemble cast for their Christmas movies, which really drew me to the script. That was the first thing that I loved about it, was that it was about a group of friends reuniting, and each of them had something to conquer. I love that. I love stories like that, because I think everyone will be able to relate to one character or another. I love that about the script.

We had a lot of fun with this one. I actually knew Ryan Rottman, who plays Ben, I knew him before – not very well, but we have a bunch of mutual friends. So, going into it, when I heard that he was also involved, I was really excited, because it's always nice to have a familiar face.

And then, Christa (B. Allen), she was the last one I found out about, and that was exciting, because "13 Going on 30," amazing. And she was lovely.

And Mari (Marielle Scott), who plays Mia, she and I clicked right away. And when I met her, I instantly was like, "OK, I know we're going to be friends for life now.

Whether you want that or not, I'm keeping you after this movie! (laughs)."

And then Cardi (Wong), who played Noah, was also just an incredible sweetheart. He lives in Vancouver. He was so sweet. When we were shooting a scene where him and I were dressed up as Mr. and Mrs. Claus, there were a lot of extras who were kids. They're super-young – they were like under the age of 10. A lot of them under the age of 8. And in between takes, he wouldn't drop character from being Santa Claus, because he didn't want to do that in front of the kids. And I thought that was amazing because, here I am, my wig is like super-tight, and I was holding it out. And there is Cardi, who's still got the Santa Claus persona – even when the cameras aren't rolling – all just to protect the kids and the magic of their Christmas, which I really admired about him. I thought that was incredibly endearing.

Q: I have seen many of your films. As I mentioned, you're the one who got me into this genre.

Would Ashley rather have lunch with a snowman (as in "Snowmance"), direct a holiday pageant ("A Merry Christmas Match"), or embark upon a book tour ("Small Town Christmas")?

Ashley Newbrough: (Laughs) You have done your homework! Wow, I'm impressed. What would I? I just came back from London, so I've gotten a taste of the travel bug; so, I'm going to say book tour. I'd love to see where that would take me.

"Christmas for Keeps" airs Saturday, Dec. 18 (10 p.m. ET), on Hallmark Movies & Mysteries, as part of the network's annual "Miracles of Christmas" programming event. It will air again throughout the holiday season. Visit <https://www.hallmarkchannel.com/>.

I was looking for someone to come clean my rugs. I saw an advertisement and coupon for Master Rug Cleaners in the Sentinel so I called them. The people that came out were very friendly, on time and did an amazing job on my rugs! They were also very reasonable. I would recommend Master Rug Cleaners to everyone.
