Gov. Andrew M. Cuomo announced this week that gatherings of up to 25 people will be allowed in phase three of reopening from the COVID-19 pandemic, up from the limit of 10.

Tuesday, Western New York joined five regions that have already entered phase three: Central New York, the Finger Lakes, the Mohawk Valley, the North Country and the Southern Tier.

Cuomo announced global public health experts cleared Western New York to enter phase three. He also announced the state has reached the lowest number of hospitalizations and deaths on the three-day average since the pandemic began. The number of total hospitalizations was down June 14 to 1,608 to lowest level since the pandemic began. Twenty-five people in New York passed away that day due to COVID-19, which is the lowest level on a three-day average since the pandemic began.

Out of the 56,611 tests conducted in New York State June 14, only 620, or 1.10 percent, were positive.
