

Stavatti flies Ukrainian flag outside Falls facility

As the Ukrainian conflict continues this week, Stavatti Aerospace Ltd. reconfirmed its continuing support for the Ukrainian government and its people. A flag can be seen flying outside the company's Niagara County operations located in the former U.S. Army Reserve Center on Porter Road in Niagara Falls.

Stavatti acquired the property more than a year ago to serve as its prototype, production, engineering and research facility. During the past four years, Stavatti has also been involved in discussions and negotiations with the Ukrainian Air Force (UAF) to provide service, Air Force-related products, and technical education.

"Since the acquisition, Stavatti has continued its negotiations with the UAF as we improved the facility and prepared it for work on Ukrainian Air Force needs," Stavatti Niagara President/CEO John R. Simon said.

Commenting on support for the Ukrainian people as the country continues its conflict with the Russian forces, Stavatti Aerospace founder, Chairman and CEO Chris Beskar said, "Stavatti has developed significant relationships with the UAF. We stand with the Ukrainians in the strongest response against the most devastating invasion of their sovereign country."

Stavatti is an aerospace and defense manufacturing enterprise that is focused on the design and production of military, commercial and general aviation aircraft. (Submitted photo)
